

PRESENT HISTORIC ENGIN TO MUSEUM

Flag of Confederate Cruiser
Shenandoah Now in Georgia Room.

CEREMONY VERY INTERESTING

Interesting ceremonies marked the presentation of the ensign of the "Shenandoah" to the Virginia Museum at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The presentation took place in the South room. Those present included the acting president of the Confederate Memorial Literary Society, Mrs. Alfred T. Gray, the vice-president, Mrs. James D. Werth, the treasurer, Mrs. H. T. Gray, and the recording secretary, Mrs. W. N. Hamlet. Of the vice-presidents were Mrs. Taylor Ellyson, Mrs. Patterson, Miss Baughman, Miss Stiles, Mrs. C. O. Cowardin and Mrs. S. H. Yonge. Members of the society present included Messrs. J. B. Hill, G. A. Lyon, Thomas H. Bock, W. B. Freeman, J. B. Lightfoot, R. Dunlop, Mrs. Hatcher, Mrs. Hancock and Mrs. Taylor. Guests of the afternoon were Mrs. R. L. Maury, Mrs. Anderson, Mrs. and Mrs. Minor and Miss Minor of Charlottesville; Miss Bacon, of Georgia; Mr. and Mrs. Fitzgerald, Mrs. Valentine, Mrs. Dillon, of Tennessee; Messrs. Freeman, Van Doren, Lightfoot, Leeb and Taylor.

Mrs. James D. Werth, the sister of the late Colonel Richard L. Maury, C. S. A., who is the ensign, which was presented by the Rev. Dr. James I. Smith, chaplain of the museum, was introduced by Mrs. Alfred Gray. Mrs. Werth said in part: "These are the colors of the Confederate States cruiser Shenandoah, commanded by James Wadell, which have been in possession of my family for forty-two years, and have been unfurled in Richmond at every reunion when monuments have been unveiled and streets decorated."

"Some years afterward," said Mrs. Werth, "when the passions engendered by that wicked strife had cooled, my brother, Colonel Richard L. Maury, brought the ensign to Virginia."

History of Ensign

"Last summer, in response to my urgent request that he should deposit it for safe keeping in the Museum, he gave me this letter."

Richmond, Va., June 3, 1897.
Mrs. Joseph Bryan, President of C. M. I. Soc., Richmond, Va.
Madam—I desire to deposit for safekeeping in the Museum, and until its return to me, or my assignee on demand, a Confederate flag, upon condition that it shall be returned upon demand, and that it does not leave the museum while in your keeping; and I wish that these conditions may be entered of record upon your minutes, and that I be furnished with a certified copy of the resolution.

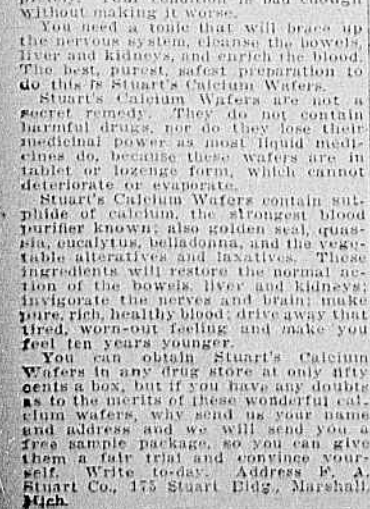

It is the ensign of the Confederate States cruiser Shenandoah, Captain James Irrell, which, when the ship was lowered in board, and set sail for Liverpool, to be surrendered to the English government. Without speaking a single vessel by the way, she arrived there November 3, 1865, and Captain Wadell turned her over to Captain Paynter, of H. M. S. Donegal.

His friends, convinced that he had regained sanity, demanded a medical examination and his release. This one thought is of Miss Eyesson, whom he says he must find as soon as he is liberated.
